Mean Coding

Carlos and Mateo were in Ms. Hernandez's second-grade class. One day during computer lab, something unexpected happened.

Mateo looked at his tablet. "Carlos, did you send me this message?"

Carlos leaned over. The screen showed a message that said, "Mateo is bad at coding. LOL!"

Carlos's eyes widened. "No! I would never say that."

"Someone used your name," Mateo said.

Ms. Hernandez noticed the boys looking at the screen and came over.

"What's going on?" she asked.

Mateo showed her the message. Ms. Hernandez read it. "Thank you for showing me, Mateo. This is an example of something called cyberbullying. That's when someone uses technology to say mean things or hurt others."

"But it said it was from me!" Carlos said. "It wasn't me."

"That's another reason cyberbullying is serious," Ms. Hernandez said. "Sometimes people pretend to be someone else to cause trouble."

Mateo looked worried. "What should we do?"

Ms. Hernandez said, "You already did the right thing by telling me. If you ever see something mean online—on a tablet, computer, or phone—you should always tell a trusted adult."

Carlos asked, "So cyberbullying is like regular bullying, but it happens with technology?"

"Exactly," Ms. Hernandez said. "And just like regular bullying, it's never okay."

What Is Cyberbullying?

Cyberbullying is using technology to:

- Send mean messages
- Share embarrassing pictures
- Spread false information
- Pretend to be someone else
- Exclude others from online groups
- Make threats or scary comments

Types of Cyberbullying

Different forms include:

- Mean messages: Hurtful words in texts or chats
- Impersonation: Pretending to be someone else
- Exclusion: Leaving someone out on purpose
- Sharing private info: Posting without permission
- Threats: Scary or threatening messages
- Rumors: Spreading false stories

Where Cyberbullying Happens

It can occur on:

- School learning platforms
- Game chat features
- Email systems
- Video platforms
- Any place with messaging

What to Do If You See Cyberbullying

Take these steps immediately:

1. Don't respond to mean messages
2. Save evidence (show an adult)
3. Tell a trusted adult right away

4. Block the person if possible
5. Report to the website or app

If Someone Cyberbullies You

Remember:

- It's not your fault
- Don't reply to mean messages
- Tell an adult immediately
- Save the messages as proof
- Know that help is available

If You See Others Being Cyberbullied

Be an upstander:

- Don't join in or share mean content
- Tell an adult about what you saw
- Support the person being targeted
- Report the behavior
- Never forward hurtful messages

Preventing Cyberbullying

Stay safe by:

- Keeping passwords private
- Only communicating with known people
- Following school online rules
- Being kind in all messages
- Thinking before you click send

Connection to Digital Footprint

Remember:

- Cyberbullying creates negative footprints
- Mean messages can be traced
- Screenshots last forever

- Your actions online have consequences
- Good digital citizens don't cyberbully

Why Cyberbullying Is Serious

It's harmful because:
